Close to Nature

HUBER

„The relationship with our vineyards is influenced by our organic and sustainable values. We have a custodial relationship with our vineyards as we believe that the basis for high quality wines is achieved by combining a healthy ecosystem with healthy soils and biodiversity.

Our naturally calcareous soils and climate in the Traisental provide excellent conditions for growing wines full of character with a unique taste and quality.

We adhere to careful canopy and yield management and we strive to keep soil erosion to a minimum.

This deep connection with sustainability and nature is at the root of our wine quality.“

The Traisental Region

The Traisental wine region lies 60 kilometers to the west of Vienna and is influenced by the two climatic zones of the Pannonian basin and the Alps.

Cool winds from the nearby Alps meet with the warm air currents from the Danube Valley. This can lead to extreme differences in the day and night temperatures which are ideal for the development of the aromas in the grapes. The climate and unique calcareous soils in this region are perfect for the production of bright, pale coloured, aromatic wines which are full of character.

The traditional grape varieties of the region are Grüner Veltliner and Riesling.

Wines with Origin

„Our goal is to produce pure, distinctive wines which truly express their origin. This philosophy is reflected in the style of wines from each of our vineyards. We harness the strengths of the region and the unique soils to produce unmistakably fresh and elegant wines, year after year.“ Markus Huber.

It is a known fact that all vineyards do not consistently produce grapes of the same quality. However, it is common knowledge among winemakers that there are some vineyards, which if treated with care and respect, can consistently produce grapes of the highest quality. These special vineyards are classified as „Erste Lage“ (Premier Cru) Weingut Huber sites.

Vinification

In our modern winecellar, traditional methods are honoured and enhanced with modern technology to produce the best wines possible.

Using gravity, the grapes and must are carefully fed through the pipes and into the tank. As part of our sustainable approach we produce our own energy-solar energy and wood fuel from our own forests and old vines

Weingut Huber is certified according to the „Nachhaltig Oesterreichischer Wein“ a certification based on environmental sustainability.
